WILL ESTABLISH A STORE ON CO-OPERATIVE PLAN

It appears that the people of Randolph are going to have a store which will be run on the co-operative plan. The first few days a team from Wausau has been canvassing that district and has secured about ten thousand dollars in subscriptions. It is expected that before the work is completed that there will be a total of about $15,000 subscribed. Those at the head of the matter are the American Co-operative Association of Wausau, and they have a store at Junction City, which has been in operation for some time past. They expect to erect a building at Randolph and locate everything to be found in a first class general merchandise store, making a specialty of the four and food.

FLOWER SHOW AT PORT

The annual flower show was held at Port Edwards on Saturday, and those who visited the exhibition were certainly delighted with the display. The show was so far ahead of the one of last year that it was completely eclipsed. It is really surprising what can be done along this line when a little interest is taken in the matter. It would seem as if larger cities might pattern after the people down there and give an exhibition in the fall that would go a long way toward stimulating the interest in the matter of raising nice flowers and eventually go a long way toward beautifying the city.

THE LIBRARY BOARD WANTS A MILLION

The War Council of the Library Association want a million dollars for the establishment of libraries at the different cantonments throughout the country, and in order to properly put the matter before the people of Grand Rapids, Miss Little Stearns, who has been appointed Field Lecturer for the War Council, will be in the city next Monday evening and speak at the Elks hall on the subject.

It might be stated that Grand Rapids will not have to subscribe the entire one million dollars in order to read. In fact, our share of the million is only $75, a rather modest sum when compared with the whole, and there is no question but what it will only cost a few minutes to secure this amount when once the matter is presented to the people in the proper light.

There are several reasons why it is desired to furnish the soldiers with as good a class of reading matter as it is possible to secure for them. The army will go into the field and that is going at the present time, is made up of young men right from our homes. Very few of them have any idea of the business. They have heard the call of their country and have responded. Nine-tenths of them have heretofore been surrounded with the comforts of home and have had access to reading matter of all kinds. Many of them have had aside a trade or a profession for the time being and the work of a soldier, and it is no wonder that they should want to keep up to their reading or study to a certain extent, so they will not be several years behind their fellows who remained at home and had access to the libraries, both private and public, of the country.

The army officers state that the soldiers have had a considerable amount of reading matter, but that often it is not possible for them to read or study. Many want books of a scientific nature, and very few of these kind have been donated by the kind people who have had the welfare of the soldier at heart and who from time to time have given either books or money for the purpose of supplying the soldiers with reading matter. The American Library Association has taken up this work at the request of the United States government. The army officers have been requested to make a list of the books they want, and it is the idea to provide each one of these cantonments with a suitable library. It is expected that one million dollars will do the work, and the association is starting out with this object in view. The cantonments or training camps are to a certain extent isolated and in most instances are at a distance from the homes of the enlisted men. The government will look after their training for efficiency in fighting, but all of at achievement and now furnish the power that hauls the great all-steel trains of the "Milwaukee Road" across the backbone of the continent for miles each day in the Bell, Rock and Blatter Road Mountains. An additional 211 miles is being electrified through the Cascade Mountains, Washington.

DEATH OF NEAL BROWN

Neal Brown of Wausau, died at Wausau, Wis., on Tuesday, at the age of 61 years after an illness that has extended over the past summer. Mr. Brown was taken sick last spring and while he was recovering his ailment was serious, he had later gained so much that it was expected that he would recover his former health to a considerable extent. Mr. Brown was prominent in the politics of the state, notwithstanding the fact that he never took a great deal of interest in a political matter. He was a well known figure in all the sportsmen in this locality. He was a unique character in many ways, but had a faculty of impressing those about him with his knowledge. While arrangements for the funeral are not known here at this time it is expected that it will be held either tomorrow or next day.

CRANBERRY MEN SAY THAT WATER IS GETTING SCARCER

During a talk recently with one of our cranberry men, that gentleman stated that in his opinion the cranberry growing in this locality hereafter by a shortage of water, provided there were any excessive demands during the summer as there was during the past season. During the past summer the temperature got so low on six occasions that it was thought best to flood the marshes, and the result was that when the real freeze came they had no adequate supply of water with which to protect the berries, and the result was that a large share of them were frozen.

Several years ago when Hemlock creek was tapped it was thought that the growers would have an unlimited supply of water, but this has not worked out just as was expected. A number of years ago after any sort of rain there would be high water in the creek for a number of days, but since the country that the creek drains has become pretty well cleared of timber, a heavy rain raises the creek abnormally for a day, and then the water subsides back to its original stage, and the result is that very little water can be secured from the creek to store for future use.

Then the marshes are being surrounded by drainage districts which do not help matters any, and have a tendency to dry up the country and make it difficult to retain water in the reservoirs and places where it was formerly held. The cranberry men will never produce successful farming sections, altho of course, opinions differ on this matter. However, most of them claim to have been raised farming the country down there and have never been able to produce profitable crops. That the soil is light and the layer of muck on top of the sand is pretty generally thin and not lasting in its composition, so that after a year or two it must be renewed and brought up to standard each year, and this expenditure, added to the cost of drainage almost invariably causes the settler to become discouraged and the property is thrown up for sale after a year or two of the land.

Of course it is a well known fact that farming and cranberry growing cannot both thrive in the same locality, and it looks at the present time as if the steady inroads made by the drainage districts would in time entirely drive the cranberry growing by making the conditions so far from those intended by nature, that the berries cannot be grown profitably.

HARNESSING THE MOUNTAIN TO CONQUER THE MOUNTAIN

The mountains for years almost impassable barriers to transportation have been made more accessible by the use of energy to the service of man.

The tremendous forces of mountain torrents have been fitted to the service of man by the power that hauls the great all-steel trains of the "Milwaukee Road" across the backbone of the continent for miles each day in the Bell, Rock and Blatter Road Mountains. An additional 211 miles is being electrified through the Cascade Mountains, Washington.

A GIANT OF EARLY WISCONSIN

In the territorial days of Wisconsin's history, there lived on a farm midway between Mineral Point and Plattville, a Scotchman of truly gigantic proportions. Seven and one-half feet tall and weighing 420 pounds, he was splendidly proportioned and without a pound of surplus fat. He was a man of soldierly tastes, and of real literary ability. Of him some interesting stories are told by a neighbor boy, writing years later for the Wisconsin Historical Society.

CAN WRITE TO GERMANY

Thru the efforts of the Red Cross Society in the foreign field it is now possible for those who live in this country to write to friends and relatives in Germany. The postoffice department at Washington has issued what is known as the international exchange coupon which costs six cents. The writer will send a letter to the postoffice soon. If a party wishes to write to relatives in Germany he must purchase two of these coupons and enclose them in a separate envelope addressed to some friend or a Red Cross Society in Sweden. They will take your letter which has been enclosed in the second envelope and purchase a stamp with one of these coupons and send it to the party addressed in Germany. When the party in Germany answers your letter the second coupon and the letter is sent to the United States and in due time will reach either the writer or the addressee. We understand that there is a certain restriction on the number of sheets you can write but the letters are not censored.

BROUGHT HERE FOR BURIAL

Henry Podawiltz, who serving in the United States army in Honolulu, was killed in a motor car accident on the 4th of August. He was a member of Troop T and had enlisted in the cavalry about two years ago. The remains were brought here Sunday following and the funeral was held the day following from the Ragan undertaking parlors. He is survived by four sisters, they being Mrs. Charles Hardard of Appleton, Mrs. T. H. Ehrle of Spokane, Wash., Mrs. Howard James of Milwaukee and Mrs. Joe Neville of Milwaukee.

A week from next Sunday, Sept. 30th, will be annual promotion day at the Congregational Sunday school. A special program has been prepared for the occasion, the details of which will appear in next week's paper.

WOOD COUNTY LANDS IN SECOND PLACE

The Wood county exhibit at the Milwaukee state fair this year must have been among the best of them for we carried off second place with a total of 2550 points in our favor, while St. Croix county, with a total of 2400, took first prize.

It is probable that more care was taken this year in preparing the exhibit than ever before, which accounts to a certain extent for our high standing at the fair. Wood county has in years past always had some very good exhibits, but those in charge of the exhibit have claimed that where we lost out was in the arrangement of the exhibit, and that if more care and work had been put into the matter that we would have made a better showing.

Those who saw the Wood county exhibit this year report that it was certainly a fine showing and that they were not at all ashamed because they were from Wood county. Following is the order in which the counties stood in the points received and the points won by each:

1. St. Croix, 2550.
2. Wood, 2550.
3. Sauk, 2231.
4. Waupaca, 2285.
5. Ozaukee, 2267.
6. Langlade, 2207.
7. LaCrosse, 2191.
8. Marathon, 2123.
9. Taylor, 2054.
10. Clark, 2025.
11. Oneida, 2019.
12. Kenosha, 1945.
13. Milwaukee, 1901.
14. Forest, 1894.
15. Ashland, 1850.
16. Lincoln, 1844.
17. Racine, 1820.
18. Outagamie, 1820.
19. Fond du Lac, 1819.

WOULD RELOCATE BRIDGE

The people down Necedah way are somewhat wrought up at the present time over the effort of some of the people to change the location of the bridge that has spanned the Wisconsin river at what is known as Peaseville Rock for a number of years past.

The present bridge has been maintained there as a toll bridge, but some time ago it was condemned by the commission and it was expected that a new bridge would be built, but nothing was done about the matter until a recent law was passed which allows a bridge to be built there and a part of the cost paid by the state. Since then interest in the matter has been revived and it was expected that a new bridge would be built there, but it seems, however, that some of the people living further down the river want the location of the bridge changed, it is said about five miles down river, and the result is that the citizens of Necedah and others in that vicinity are decidedly opposed to the change.

A meeting of the state commission was held on Tuesday at which those interested in the matter were given a chance to voice their opinion on the subject, and beside those from that section, a number went down from this city to assist in retaining the present location. The making of a state highway commission listened to the arguments on the subject and will give their decision on the matter later.

It is stated that the opposition to the present site comes from the people of Friendship, who are of the opinion that it would benefit that village to move the bridge further down river.

TRIED TO BURN THE JAIL

Ed Reimer was arrested one day last week charged with having furnished liquor to Indians. He was found guilty and fined $25 and given 30 days in jail for default of payment he was sentenced to 60 days in the county jail.

After having been locked in the county jail the upper part of the jail structure was found to be full of smoke, and Mrs. Normington notified the sheriff and investigation showed that the man had set on fire the mattresses on the bed above. He was taken out of this part of the jail and confined in the insane ward, and later a fire was discovered there. Some fires were extinguished without any great damage, altho Reimer was nearly suffocated the first time he was taken from the cell.

It is reported that he tried to set the calaboose afire on the west side some years ago while confined there, so he must have a particular liking for this sort of thing. He was searched before being placed in the cell, so that it was a mystery to the officers where he got his matches. He then asked why he tried to set the jail afire he merely stated that they had no money to look him up.

CABBAGE $7; ONIONS 75c

Seven dollars a ton will be paid for cabbage soon in Racine and Kenosha counties. Last year $35 per ton was paid in the fall. Onions are selling at 25 cents a bushel as compared with $2 last fall. These prices were announced by commission men and buyers for sauer kraut factories. There is a possibility that the prices may drop a little because of the enormous crops now looked for.

The heavy rainstorm last week was of untold benefit to the growers of cabbage and onions. While both crops were in healthy condition, rain was necessary to assure bumper crops. Thousands of acres in Racine and Kenosha counties were this year devoted to cabbage and onions. Because of the dry summer both crops have been backward but it was stated by buyers that harvesting would begin about September 15.

A CO-OPERATIVE STORE

It is probable that the Cohen Bros. department store, of which Joseph Cohen is manager, will be reorganized into a co-operative store, if the present plans are carried out. Mr. Cohen now has in mind. It is a proposition that he has been figuring on for some time past, and whether or not the changes made will depend upon the people of this city, and the readiness to subscribe for the stock. It is proposed to capitalize at $20,000, Mr. Cohen holding $15,000 of this amount, and the remainder sold to the people of this community in such amounts as they may desire. The Cohen store to continue the management of the store at a salary of $2,000 per year, and will guarantee a dividend of 5% to the stockholders, and if the profits warrant it there will be a bonus of 5% to those who have purchased there.

As to whether the change is made or not will depend on the people and their desire for stock in the new concern.

A BIG TURNOUT FOR THE SOLDIER BOYS

Grand Rapids turned out on Tuesday evening in gala attire to attend the doings at the Amusement Hall, given for the fourteen soldier boys who left the city following the outbreak of the war. The boys were a part of Uncle Sam's army and he made into fighting men.

The band turned out and a procession of about 1000 people, headed by the band, marched across the river to the Amusement Hall, where a large number of people were gathered. The people were taking their seats. The seats in the hall were soon all filled, and there were enough people left standing to fill the aisles and the balcony. The boys were introduced to the audience and were given a warm welcome. The boys were then made, which consumed about an hour.

After the speech the band played for a short time, and the people could dance on the pavement, but this part of the program did not seem to appeal very strongly to the people. The boys were then given a chance to look on, but very few availed themselves of the opportunity to dance.

The boys were then a bonnet during the first part of the evening at the Witter Hall. The names of the boys who departed on Wednesday were:

- Carl P. Krohl, city.
- Joseph Szlach, city.
- John A. Mullin, city.
- John D. Truett, city.
- Donald H. Ragan, city.
- John J. Benzard, city.
- Martin Rucinski, city.
- James P. Schmitt, city.
- Arthur N. Marshfield, city.
- Joe T. Dexterville, city.

CHALLENGE TO THE WOMEN

RED CROSS HEADQUARTERS

It is highly important, if the Red Cross work in Grand Rapids goes forward with that degree of success that it ought to have, that more heartily enter into the work at headquarters. Up to the present time, much has been accomplished in the making of a Red Cross headquarters, but the bulk of the work has been done by a small number of ladies who have given their time and strength freely. There must be a realization of the fact that this Red Cross work is a war measure. This country is engaged, and will be for some time engaged, in a war that will take our young men, and will use every material and spiritual resource that the nation has. It is not asking too much of the women of this city that they should take the place of the men who are in the way of home service, that the suffering on the battle front may be reduced as much as possible.

It is a time when all our non-essential pleasures and work should be set aside, and every energy devoted to the work of making the articles that are surely going to be needed by the men who are in the front. In the face of this urgent necessity, the Red Cross appeals to the women of Grand Rapids to come to headquarters, and give whatever they can of time and strength to the work of making supplies for our boys in France.

We cannot enter this appeal too strongly. In order, therefore, to relieve that which we have planned, we are going to start a Red Cross drive which will last until the 25th of October. The great purpose of this drive will be to enlist every woman and girl in the city in the work of making articles for our soldiers. These articles are to be shipped the last part of October. The city will be divided by wards, and committees will be appointed in each ward to ask for knitters. When these committees come to your house, ask that each woman will be able to take some articles to knit, so that the work of our chapters will stand up favorably in the fall. The work of the drive will be to make the work of the Red Cross Chapter, but each knitter will be asked to purchase her own knitting needles. We have faith that if the women of Grand Rapids will set themselves to this task of the home service for their country, that we will have need as a city to be ashamed of the work done. We, therefore, appeal not only to the public spirit, but to the loyalty of every woman and girl in the city to do everything that they possibly can to make the work of the Red Cross in this community a splendid success.

WILL OPEN REPAIR SHOP

Jensen & Anderson have leased the building belonging to Charles Schroeder, now occupied by Holmes & Lemons as a blacksmith shop, and will open therein a repair shop to take care of their Ford business, making it a service station where everything in this line can be handled. The building is of brick and will make a good roomy shop for this purpose.

Holmes & Lemons are preparing to discontinue their business by the end of the month, altho Mr. Holmes will probably remain in the blacksmithing business in this city.

FLAGS RAISED AT NEKOOSA AND PORT

Doings out of the ordinary were pulled off at Nekoosa and Port Edwards on Saturday afternoon, at which time there were flag raisings at both the villages, the ceremonies being participated in by the school children, members of the clergy, village officers and citizens of the villages.

New steel flag poles had been erected by the Nekoosa-Edwards board at both places, these being one hundred feet high, and certainly the nicest things of the kind in this part of the state.

The ceremonies started at Nekoosa at 2 o'clock, and were witnessed by practically all the people of the village, the mill being shut down and the workmen participating in the affair. Dr. Waters, president of the village acted as master of ceremonies at Nekoosa, and the children of the public and parochial schools followed to the park in a body, each little boy or girl carrying a flag. The ceremonies were opened by a flame of the torch, the children, Rev. O'Neil of the Congregational church and Mr. H. R. Goggin of this city. SARATOGA

Once more the Grim Reaper demands our chronicle and we with sorrow record the passing of a mother, Mrs. Van Anderson, in Sweden.

Coming to this country a young woman, lived for some years in Chicago. The past twelve years she has lived on a farm in our town and in that time she has so endeared herself to her community that to mention those who were at the last sad rites would be to probably name every adult who knew her in Saratoga and who were home on that day.

She leaves her husband, three daughters, one son, a granddaughter, and a sister in our town, besides a sister and other relatives in Chicago and a brother in Indiana, also a sister in Sweden. She was ever an active, faithful member of our Union chapel, Sunday school and Ladies' Aid. Mrs. Anderson is at rest.

There is no death: What seems so is transition. This life of mortal breath, is but the passage to the life beyond.

When we are called to death, there is no father, the stars go down to rise upon a death shore.

Mrs. Anderson's friends are dear to the heart of every one who knew her. Her death was a great loss to the community.

Among the out of town guests of the family in attendance at the funeral of Mrs. Wm. Anderson we met Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Anderson, a brother of Wm. and Mrs. Knute Anderson, a sister of Mrs. Anderson, all of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Hjerstedt and sons Emil and Gustave of Kellner were present at Mrs. Anderson's funeral.

As were also Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Eberhart and Mr. Eberhart's mother, Mr. G. H. Munroe and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Witt.

The floral offerings were abundant and beautiful, the casket being covered with bouquets and many beautiful designs. The services were short, simple and impressive at the home at 1 o'clock, after which the remains were taken to our Union chapel where Rev. C. C. Becker of the B. E. church of Grand Rapids conducted a beautiful service and delivered a very forceful address in place to the living, basing his remarks on St. James' query "What is the life? It is even as a vapor."

Mrs. Peter Knuteson, Mrs. J. J. Johnson, Miss Branne and Miss Dietrich furnished the music.

We extend the sympathy we all appreciate in times like these and certainly so good a woman as was Mrs. Anderson commands each one's love and sympathy to the bereaved family.

BLANKETS UNDERPRICED

The mills have no more blankets to sell. Even the most optimistic mill agents declare that there will be an absolute shortage of good blankets before February. Fortunately we secured our usual quota of cotton and wool blankets many months ago. These goods are now selling, and in urging you to buy needed blankets now, we believe that we are serving your interests best. Our present quotations are below parity with prevailing prices in many localities. Cotton and wool blankets in plain colors or in attractive plaid designs are offered here this week at advantageous savings.

FLANNEL SHIRTS

Indications point to an almost universal return to the wearing of flannel shirts by men in the ordinary walks of life. In a spirit of economy many men will revert to the soft flannel shirt that can be washed and ironed at home. Some fellows must wear a dressier shirt because their vocation demands it; but the fellows who don't have to wear "billed" shirts are getting into the good old flannels as fast as they can.

FALL WEIGHT UNDERWEAR

With a touch of fall in the evening air and mornings crisp and cool, the nearer approach of chilly weather brings to mind the need of warmer underwear. In our selections for the new season we have embodied those weights and styles exactly suited to our climate, and in each grade we believe the values presented represent the best obtainable at their prices.

Attorney General Owen is fully determined that the railroads of the state shall comply with the law requiring free drinking cups on trains.

A complaint has been made against the St. Paul road with regard to the matter. The 1914 legislation passed a law requiring free drinking cups on trains. When the matter was brought to the attention of the officials that free cups were not being furnished the reply was made that Wisconsin was the only state in the Union that required free drinking cups that all other states permitted the use of the penny-in-the-slot to obtain a cup and that in Wisconsin the sign that the cups may be obtained from the brakeman is a substantial compliance with the law.

Attorney General Owen intends to prosecute unless the law is complied with.

Under instructions from the state conservation commission, Game Warden Smith last week blew out the big dam on the Eagle river in the western section of Marinette county.

The Eagle is no longer a logging stream and the dam served no purpose. As a result of the stoppage of the water the latter became stagnant for several miles up and down stream and brook trout perished in it because of this reason. It took him two days to complete the work and 200 pounds of dynamite was used. The dam was effectively removed and the stream has assumed its former bed.

Two Stevens Point policemen have jumped the job because there is not enough pay in the proposition to pay them for putting in their time, and they have been finding some trouble to fit in wages. The pay of the policemen $55 a month over there, but there are so many jobs open at better prices that it is impossible to hold the men.

The job of policeman is generally considered to be quite a snap, but then a policeman has to do occasionally the same as the rest of us, and it may be that they have to pay for their groceries and clothes when they get any, so the cost of living affects them the same as the remainder of humanity.

H. C. Gore, government chemist in the agricultural department of the government, arrived at Rhinelander several days ago for the purpose of drawing up a contract with local people for the establishment of the government potato drying plant, moved there from Arlington, Va., where it has been used experimentally by the government. After looking over several prospective factory sites, Mr. Gore picked one known as the Wabash screen door location. It was donated to the use of the many by the organization with a capital stock of about $25,000. When moved there the plant will make Wisconsin the only state in the country with a plant for drying potatoes. The building to be constructed for a use of this plant will be brick, 150 feet long by 60 feet wide, two stories in height. Additions will be made as the new industry develops. It will be used by the government for experimental purposes. The local company, however, will benefit the benefit of the new developments discovered by the government chemists. Potato flakes, a product of this factory, will no doubt, be served to our boys in Europe before the war is over.

Under instructions from the state conservation commission, Game warden Smith last week blew out the big dam on the Eagle river in the western section of Marinette county. The Eagle is no longer a logging stream and the dam served no purpose. As a result of the stoppage of the water, the latter became stagnant for several miles up and down the stream and brook trout perished in it because of this reason. It took two men two days to complete the work and 200 pounds of dynamite was used. The dam was effectively removed and the stream has assumed its former bed.

Two Stevens Point policemen have jumped the job because there is not enough pay in the proposition to pay them for putting in their time, and they have been firing some trouble to fill the vacancies. They pay the policemen $55 a month over there, but there are so many jobs open here that it is impossible to hold the men. The job of policeman is generally considered to be quite a snap, but then a policeman has to eat occasionally the same as the rest of the men. They have to pay for their groceries and clothes when they get any, so the cost of living affects them the same as the remainder of humanity.

LICENSE REFUSED FOR LABOR AGENCY

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION DENIES MICHIGAN MAN PERMIT TO OPEN OFFICE.

NEED WORKERS IN STATE

Committee on Unemployment Reports That All Who Want Work Can Secure Jobs—Twenty-two Employment Offices in State.

Madison—The industrial commission has issued a decision denying the application of William Mitchell to conduct an employment agency in Milwaukee for common labor.

A hearing was held upon this application at Milwaukee on Aug. 22, at which it developed that Mitchell now conducts an employment agency at Escanaba, Mich., and that he was desirous of having a license in Milwaukee for the reason that it has become a great center for workmen who work for lumber companies in the northern peninsula of Michigan.

The application was opposed by the citizens' committee on unemployment, which includes representatives of the city council of Milwaukee, the county board of supervisors of Milwaukee, Merchants and Manufacturers association and the federated trades council.

This committee took the position that at this time it would be unwise to license more private employment agencies since all who want work can readily obtain employment. It objected, moreover, to any encouragement being given to the shipment of labor outside of the state when the demands of Wisconsin industry can not be supplied.

Twenty-two private employment agencies were licensed in the state this year, all of which were in operation last year with the exception of one agency in Superior.

The largest number of employment agencies are located in Milwaukee, where there are eight agencies for common labor, one agency for clerical employment, and one agency for common labor agency, one office help agency, two teachers' agencies and one nurses' agency.

Superior and Ashland each have two common labor agencies and there is one private employment agency in each of the following cities: Janesville, Fond du Lac, and Marinette.

BABY PARALYSIS DECLINED

Summer Health Record Shows Only Eleven Cases Reported During July and August With Five Deaths.

Madison—One of the significant facts about the summer health record of Wisconsin, according to the state board of health, is the almost negligible amount of infantile paralysis. During July only five cases and three deaths were reported to the state board of health, and in August six cases and two deaths.

In the summer of 1916 a total of 475 cases occurred all over the state, and the total deaths from the disease reached seventy-nine.

Wisconsin statistics, just compiled, show a large reduction in smallpox, which fell from 115 cases in July to sixty in August, and only two deaths from this disease were reported last month, and none the month before. Scarlet fever cases fell from 235 to 151, measles from 338 to 94, chickenpox from 61 to 27, and whooping cough from 288 to 229. Diphtheria increased (July and August) from 151 to 195, typhoid from 22 to 39, tuberculosis from 226 to 272, and meningitis from 5 to 8. Four cases of infantile blindness occurred last month; July had none.

BIG INCREASE IN TAXES

Street Railway Companies to Pay $120,000 Above Last Year—New Law Affects Division of Money.

Madison—Street railway companies operating in the state will pay over $120,000 increase in taxes this year, according to the tax levy and distribution tables announced by the state tax commission. These figures have been filed with the secretary of state for tax collection. The total amount of taxes paid by these companies last year was $285,754.50 as compared with $947,764.70.

A new law passed by the last legislature changing the distribution of the tax. Hereafter 15 per cent was retained by the state and 85 per cent went to the towns through which the lines operated. This year the portion which heretofore went to the towns is divided so that the counties receive 20 per cent of the total tax; the towns 65 per cent and the remainder of the state remains at 15 per cent.

Of the total taxes assessed against these companies this year the state retains $142,354.74; the counties will receive $185,652.94 and the towns will receive $610,047.05.

One of the principal reasons for the large increase in the street railway tax, is the fact that a slightly higher tax rate, is the increased valuation of the Wisconsin-Minnesota Light & Power company properties with the large dam at Wisconsin. Last year this company paid a tax of $65,837.15. This year the tax is $110,768.69.

Madison—Gov. D. L. Phillips has laid before Attorney General Owen information that a Chicago fuel company had refused to deliver 3,600 tons of coal for the Stout Training School, although contracted for.

As soon as the president fixed the price of coal and the school asked for delivery, the Chicago company canceled the contract.

The attorney general is asked to see if steps can not be taken to enforce the contract. Meantime the matter is being taken up with the federal government.

ROBBERS MAKE A BIG HAUL

Yeggs Enter Shoshone Bank and Get Away With $7,000 in Cash and Bonds of Great Value.

Appleton—The bank of Shoshone was routed by professional crooks and $7,000 taken. The fact that high explosive was used and not a sound heard proves that the robbery was committed by professionals. Additional proof is that the robbers were not in the town class was evidenced by the fact that they took every bit of collateral, including postage stamps. Entrance was gained through a barred window. The robbers then proceeded to bore a hole over the dial of the safe, poured in the explosive, and blew it into smithy.

A citizen, pushing the bank at 1:30 a. m. noticed that every curtain in the bank was drawn, it being customary to leave them up.

Nelson Denies Son Is Guilty. Madison—That Myron Nelson, son of Congressman John M. Nelson, Wisconsin, is not guilty of violation of the draft act, is declared in a letter written by Attorney General Gregory to Washington. BADGER TROOPS LEAVE FOR WAGO

FIRST REGIMENT OF FIELD ARTILLERY DEPARTS FROM CAMP DOUGLAS.

ALL MEN TRAVELING LIGHT

First Wisconsin Cavalry and Third Infantry Regiment Will Also Make Early Start for Camp MacArthur, Texas.

Camp Douglas—Their heavy army coats wrapped lightly about them in a spirit of goodby to this northern part of the country, the remainder of the First regiment of field artillery left camp here for Waco, Texas. The move was completed through campers received several days ago, but nothing definite was known until a few hours before a hurried entrainment was executed.

The batteries comprising the body that left are: A and D, of Milwaukee; B and E, of Green Bay, and C, of Racine. One battery of the regiment, F, of Racine, is already at Waco, having gone there with the first contingent of Wisconsin troops several weeks ago.

The men traveled light, all suit cases and boxes that were not sent home having been confiscated. The new address of this regiment will be Camp MacArthur, Waco, Texas. It is expected that shortly the name of the regiment will be changed to conform with the war department's new scheme of designating the units.

The First Wisconsin cavalry and the Third Infantry are scheduled to leave for Texas this week, after which there will be no movement of the Wisconsin troops until after Sept. 18.

CONVICTED IN FAST TIME

Jury Out Only Twenty Minutes in Italian Murder Case—Trial Concluded in Single Day.

Madison—Twenty minutes after the jury in the case of Carmelo Stancampiano had taken the case, the jury room, they returned a verdict of guilty. This is one of the speediest murder trials that has ever been tried in Wisconsin.

Stancampiano is alleged to have shot and killed Pasquale Briska on the morning of July 19 at Michigan and Van Buren streets.

The trial started in the morning at 10 o'clock and was finished at 5:05 in the afternoon, at which time the jury returned its verdict of guilty.

Judge Backus entered a motion for a new trial in behalf of the defendant. The argument on the motion will be heard in a few days.

"I think the Italians are being abused too much as a result of the war," said Thomas Neasey, president of the Filer & Stowell company. "The greater part of them are good citizens and should not be subjected to annoyance because a small number of men of their race have behaved discretely."

COAL SUPPLY IS ASSURED

Madison—Will Have Enough Anthracite for Winter If Receipts Are Maintained.

Madison—If the present rate of receipts can be maintained, Milwaukee ought to have enough hard coal to last through the winter, the fuel board of the Milwaukee county council of defense concludes in a report, which adds, however, that it may be necessary to substitute a certain amount of soft coal for hard.

The fuel board concludes from an examination of the various items of expense that enter into the bringing of coal from the mines to the bins of anthracite in Milwaukee are not unduly high, considering the president's "mine prices" recently announced, transportation charges, and the costs of handling.

WAR TAX BILL WINS AIDS ENEMIES OF U. S.

MEASURE PASSED BY SENATE PROVIDES $2,400,000,000 LEVY.

All Consumption Taxes on Coffee, Tea, Sugar, Cocoa and Molasses Struck Out.

Washington, Sept. 12.—The war tax bill—the largest single taxation measure in American history—was passed by the senate. It provides for a levy somewhat under $2,400,000,000, as compared with $1,897,570,000 proposed in the bill as it passed the house May 28.

The vote was 60 to 4. Senators Borah, Gronna, La Follette and Norris being recorded in opposition. The bill is one of the speediest war tax measures that has ever been passed by congress.

The senate committee increased the war excess profits section of the bill from $502,000,000 to $1,000,000,000. The house schedule upon this head was $200,000,000.

Excise taxes imposed upon the war excess profits by a graduated scale system, based upon the difference between an average of profits taken during three previous years, and the profits of 1917.

Deductions of from 10 to 10 per cent are allowed, based on percentage of business upon invested capital. Profits derived through professional or other services involving practically no capital are exempted.

Of the $842,000,000 realized from incomes, about $482,000,000 comes from individual taxes and $360,000,000 from corporation taxes. A new normal 2 per cent tax upon individuals pays $80,000,000. Surpluses upon large incomes will yield $308,700,000.

There is a new 4 per cent tax upon corporations and a new 10 per cent tax upon corporations. The tax is 6 per cent in all, increasing the house bill $104,000,000.

Present exemptions from taxation of $3,000 for single men and $4,000 for married men are reduced $1,000 and $2,000 respectively. The senate committee cut out of the house bill a retroactive tax upon 1916 incomes, calculated to pay $108,000,000.

U. S. SUPREME IN THE AIR

Baker Says Victory Is Assured by New Motor Invented for American Airplanes.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The Liberty motor, the airplane engine on which the United States is relying to establish definite air superiority over the Germans, has passed its final test and is a complete and gratifying success, Secretary Baker announced on Wednesday.

In his announcement the secretary tells how the genius and energy of American motorists contributed its secrets and achievements to the government to produce the Liberty motor which is to carry the thousands of American airplanes over the battlefields of Europe.

"Probably the war has produced no greater single achievement," the statement says, and relates for the first time the story of design and construction of the new motor, which has added a remarkable chapter to American engineering records.

The Argentine government sent to the German legation passports to be delivered to Count Luxburg, the German minister in Buenos Aires. The whereabouts of Count Luxburg still is unknown to the Argentine government.

The Argentine government also has demanded an explanation from Sweden regarding the transmission of messages to Germany.

The note sent by Foreign Minister Puyredon to Count von Luxburg, in which the German minister was tendered his passports, reads:

"Mr. Minister: You having ceased to be persona grata to the Argentine government, the government has decided to deliver to you your passports, which I transmit herewith by order of his excellency, the president of the nation."

Germans Urging Demonstrations Because of Wilson's Reply to the Pope's Peace Cause.

Copenhagen, Sept. 12.—The Berlin leaflet "Anzeiger," which is acting as the chief organ for the demonstration of indignation against President Wilson's reply to Pope Benedict's peace proposal, is now endeavoring to mobilize the women of Germany in its campaign.

The newspaper publishes an appeal from Germany to take part in a protest movement, saying that the voice of women will attract far more attention in the United States than protest by men, which constitute an old story.

"Millions of German women must cast their curses and disgust in the face of this indirect cause of the death of thousands of German men."

How Uncle Sam Is Going to Whip the Germans in the Air

WITHIN ten months the United States will have 25,000 battle planes in service in Europe. The planes will be equipped with American motors of 250-horsepower, capable of driving them at a maximum speed of 100 miles an hour. Furthermore, these motors will be constructed principally of aluminum and will be of less weight per horsepower than any airplane motor heretofore built. Thus the plans of the aircraft board of the council of national defense, adopted by the war department and financed by congress, are in a fair way to be speedily consummated.

Not long ago, the Washington correspondent of the Kansas City Star, who signs himself "H. J. H.," went to Dayton, O., to interview one of the inventors of the airplane about America's great aerial program, planned to "blitz" the German army. Portions of the reporter's story are printed below. It gives some details of what Uncle Sam is doing to the production of an army of man-birds.

A young man jumped and caught the propeller blade of the biplane and gave it a pull. It turned half way around and stopped. He repeated the performance two or three times. Suddenly there was a roar and the propeller became a blur.

It was a hot morning in Dayton and the breeze from the revolving propeller fan looked refreshing. The plane wasn't going up. It was blocked on the ground and they were merely trying out the engine. I stepped forward into the breeze.

"The power isn't turned on yet," said Orville Wright, at my side. "It won't be so pleasant here when it is."

The roar turned into thunder. The ground seemed to be blowing away in a cloud of dust. We grabbed for our hats and retreated.

"Just one of the training planes," Mr. Wright explained. "Only a hundred horsepower."

Of no importance on a battle line, perhaps. But one of the gathering squadrons that even now are beginning to cast a faint black shadow across the German horizon.

For this field, with its four square miles, is to be one of the great centers of the aircraft work which is relied on to turn the scale of battle on the western front. And there at one end of the field, which has been named the Wilbur Wright field, in honor of one of the two brothers who invented the airplane, is the little, weather-beaten shed which was used by the brothers as the hangar for their original plane, only thirteen years ago.

It is just a plain shed, and beyond it stretches the long line of hangars of the future. It is a pretty, nearly two miles of buildings, calculated to house the 240 planes that are to be assembled in the field eight miles east of Dayton. And, yet, it is fitly preserved as a memorial to the days when air flight was being slowly and painstakingly developed by the daring scientific genius of the Wright brothers.

In Washington I had talked with the men whose imagination had conceived the great $40-million dollar aircraft program, and who are now in charge of its execution. They are engineers and executives, not practical aircraft men. They know America's industrial and engineering resources. Their enthusiasm is contagious.

I went to Dayton to talk with the world's foremost aeronautical engineer and to learn some of the difficulties that must be overcome before we can put out the eyes of the Germans in the air, organize our surprise attacks, destroy the enemy communications and blow up the Krupp works at Essen.

Orville Wright is a man of 46, of medium size. Modest and unassuming, he gives the impression of independence in thought and action. He is deliberative in manner, well-organized, perfectly controlled, clear thinking.

"We can do the job," he said, as we drove to the aviation field. "And it's worth doing. It offers us the one big hope of winning this war next year, instead of permitting it to drag along for years to come. All our information is that Germany and the allies are keeping about an equal number of planes on the battle front. We can't be sure, but their resources in building seem about equal. Each side probably has about 3,500 planes in active service on the western front, aside from their reserves and training planes.

"If we were in a position to put several thousand planes, manned by trained aviators, on the western front today, we might bring the war to an early end."

"By using the planes to extend the range of artillery, and bombing the enemy lines of communication and his munition plants and naval bases?"

"Possibly, to some extent. I am not particularly sanguine over bombing, and I do not believe other flyers are. The men who have never flown are the most enthusiastic over the possibilities of dropping bombs. The undisciplined guns keep the flyers at a height of about two miles. Anyone who has ever flown at that height knows the tremendous difficulty of hitting a target. There is nothing for him to gauge his speed by. The bomb drops through air currents moving in different directions which deflect it from its course.

"The Krupp works at Essen offer a large enough target so that a squadron of airplanes might be able to put them out of business. Other plants might be successfully attacked. Under favorable conditions other bombing operations might be carried out successfully. But my idea of the effectiveness of supremacy in the air is along different lines."

"Which ones?"

"In other wars the element of surprise has determined the outcome when the forces were of approximately equal strength. The general who could mass his men so as to fall on a smaller force of the enemy won the battle. The airplane has stopped that. Now a commander on the western front knows exactly what his opponent is doing. There is no chance to mass men for surprise attacks. Consequently, we have the present deadlock in France.

"What we must do is to drive every enemy airplane out of the air. By doing this we not only prevent the Germans from knowing what we are doing, but we also cripple their artillery, for artillery fire has been directed by the airplanes. Then we can plan surprise attacks and can drive the enemy back. In modern warfare the side without airplanes is at a hopeless disadvantage. When we gain complete command of the air, when we have literally smothered the enemy airplanes, we break the deadlock and win the war.

"The airplane has produced a deadlock. The airplane can end it."

"How soon can we hope to do this?"

"We have the best men in the country at work on the problem. But people must not be impatient if at first our progress seems slow. Only men who have tried it know the difficulties of building a high-power airplane motor."

In the matter of personnel, it may be noted, our aircraft promoters believe we have a great superiority over the rest of the world, for this reason: It takes an exceptional sort of man to make a good flyer. He must be quick-witted and have the steepest sort of nerves. Otherwise, he comes to grief and smashes an expensive machine. Men of this type volunteered extensively in Britain and Canada early in the war. They constituted the units that went into the battle line without adequate artillery protection and so were largely destroyed. The same forces operated to destroy the strong and vigorous young men of France and Germany who would have made good aviators. So today America is the greatest reservoir in the world of the right sort of material for the personnel of the aircraft service. While the other countries are having difficulty in getting proper men for flyers—England has invited us to send men to her aviation schools because she cannot keep them filled—our problem is merely to train them and provide them with equipment.

I asked Mr. Wright what speed plane we might expect to develop.

"It is a complicated problem, the limit of useful speed," he replied. "A good many reckless statements are made on the subject by persons with vivid imaginations. It is safe to say there are machines on the western front that can make 130 miles an hour. So far as speed is concerned there are no inherent impossibilities in developing a plane that might make as high as two hundred miles an hour. The difficulty is in the landing."

"A machine's landing speed is about half its maximum speed. That is, if a plane is designed to make a speed of 150 miles an hour its wings will not sustain it in the air if it travels slower than twenty-five miles. It must be moving at a speed of at least twenty-five miles an hour to make a successful landing. So a plane with a speed of 130 miles an hour cannot land at a speed of much less than sixty-five miles."

From the field we drove to the laboratory. It is simply a development of the crude shed in which he and his brother together worked out the problem of air flight. The airplane was no lucky find. It was not developed by rule of thumb. Wilbur and Orville Wright, sons of a Dayton United Brethren bishop, after getting through high school, set up a bicycle repair shop. They had a natural taste for mechanics and for sports. Twenty-one years ago they became interested in the experiments of Lillenthal, the German experimenter, in a glider. His death attracted their attention to his work. For two years they worked on data and "hows" that other investigators had produced, only to find that the work so far done was worthless.

So in their own shop in Dayton they devised a "wind tunnel"—a chute through which an air blast was driven by an electric fan, and set to work measuring the resistances of curved surfaces by a wonderfully ingenious method of their own devising. By a long series of exact measurements and elaborate mathematical calculations involving sines and cosines and such, they worked out the problem of the curvature of the planes and of the propellers.

The problems of balance were enormously intricate. But these, too, they solved. They were pioneers. They had to discover the difficulties and then find the way out. So they had to devise the methods. It took unlimited patience, resourcefulness and hard thinking to gain success. Both the brothers were primarily scientific men. They were impatient to devote themselves to the scientific side of furthering the development of aeronautics. But they necessarily had to finance companies, fight patent suits and conduct the business of establishing a new industry. Wilbur Wright died five years ago, and in 1915 Orville Wright was able to dispose of his business interests and devote himself to the scientific work where his heart has always been.

In his well-equipped laboratory in Dayton he is now conducting two lines of work which will be of immediate value in the great aircraft program planned by the government. One is the measurement of the air resistance of curved surfaces; the other the development of a stabilizer to make the control of the airplane more nearly automatic. Other aeronautical laboratories the world over have made these measurements of air resistance, but the figures have sometimes been as far as 100 or 200 per cent apart. The results obtained by the Wright method fourteen years ago proved substantially accurate, and now Orville Wright is taking up the work where he left it off.

"I hope to provide the proper measurements for a large variety of planes," he said, "so that in building different sorts we shall not have to depend on cut and try."

"The stabilizer is an intricate device by which the action of a revolving fan holds the airplane steady."

"We can set the stabilizer," the inventor explained. "In such a way, for instance, as to keep the plane moving in a circle, leaving the pilot free to use his hands for making adjustments."

The stabilizer has been tested out successfully, but needs further refinements so as to do away with the need of daily adjustments before Mr. Wright is willing to put it into service. He is

Other aeronautical laboratories the world over have made these measurements of air resistance, but the figures have sometimes been as far as 100 or 200 per cent apart. The results obtained by the Wright method fourteen years ago proved substantially accurate, and now Orville Wright is taking up the work where he left it off.

"I hope to provide the proper measurements for a large variety of planes," he said, "so that in building different sorts we shall not have to depend on cut and try."

"The stabilizer is an intricate device by which the action of a revolving fan holds the airplane steady."

"We can set the stabilizer," the inventor explained. "In such a way, for instance, as to keep the plane moving in a circle, leaving the pilot free to use his hands for making adjustments."

The stabilizer has been tested out successfully, but needs further refinements so as to do away with the need of daily adjustments before Mr. Wright is willing to put it into service. He is on intimate terms with members of the government's aircraft production board, and all his results are at the disposal of the government for the prosecution of the war.

He has great expectations of the development of aircraft in practical use after the war, when thousands of trained flyers shall return to civil life, and when we shall have enormous factory capacity for turning out the best machines in the world. But that, again, is another story.

The Joy and Chivalry of Air Fighting.

Flying has become as much a matter of routine in war as marching on land or steaming on the sea, and men are ordered to fly, at fixed hours and for stated periods, as though flying were a natural act, and not the organized miracle that it really is. A correspondent of the London Times writes interestingly about it, saying:

One to France the last chivalries, the last beauties of battle have taken refuge in the air. From the legislation of the earth, the fighting romance of war has taken wings and climbed sunwards. There alone combat is individual, vital, decisive. There alone has the combatant to rely solely on himself. There alone is the battle decided not through volts of distance, between impersonal and unknown hosts, but wing to wing and face to face. There alone are the rare courtesies of warfare still possible; it was a British squadron that suggested, and a British airman who executed, the dropping of a funeral wreath over the German lines as a tribute to the air-warrior Lillenthal. And there alone can individual skill and courage have their just reward. For one flash, between a dip and a climb of his scintillating flight, the fighting airman may catch the glint of his opponent's eye, and, if the momentary burst of fire be truly directed, his hand crumple up in his seat and the nose of his machine dip and begin its fatal spinning dive, while the victor soars up again to safety and solitude.

And what a solitude is his! From the moment in the airplane when the mechanic has given his last leave, and the last curt verbal exchange, "Contact, sir—Contact," has been given, and the engine sets up its mighty droning song, the airman is alone, submerged in that roaring music, deaf and dumb. For perhaps a minute he sits there testing his engine, fingering his levers, assuring himself that all is well; and then, as the drone sinks to a hum, he makes his last communication—the characteristic quick outward wave of the hands and arms. The checks are pulled away, the hum rises to a drone, breaks into a roar, and he is off, bumping over the uneven earth until his speed gives his wings their life, the rough ground is shed away from beneath his feet, and he rises into the sudden peace of the air.

The "peace of the air" may seem like a contradiction in terms in war time; but it is the supreme sensation of fair-weather flying, apart from flying and fighting. Once you have got your height, whether it be a thousand or ten thousand feet, you seem to be absolutely at rest—at rest in sunshine and a strong breeze. The dim carpet or map beneath you hardly moves; and although the trembling fingers of the little clocks and dials before you witness to the fluidity of your element and the loneliness of your hold on it, yet the only things that do not seem to move are the wings and stays of your machine which surround you, a right cage from which you look forth upon the slow-turning earth or the rushing clouds. It is not until the engine has been shut off, and you begin to plane in mighty circles toward the earth again, that you get, in that delicious rush down the hill of air, any sensation of speed; and not until, a moment before landing, you skim over the earth at 80 miles an hour, that you realize with what pace you have been riding through the airy vacancy.

But these are the sensations of mere joy-riding. Ten or twenty minutes play take the fighting pilot to his station in the air over the enemy's lines. How puny the absurdity of the greatest war of all time can appear is only known to the airman as he sits in the breeze and the sun, high above it all; the danger to him is not down there, although to ascend into his remote sphere he has to pass through the zone of anti-aircraft fire; his own particular enemy is the German fighting machine, which may come down to hurry or destroy the observer, and which he must himself attack the moment it makes its appearance. Between these two he watchfully patrols, and all this time, although a battle may be raging beneath him, he hears nothing but the strong, rasping hum of his engine. He flies and fights alone.

RAVAGING A WASTED COUNTRY.

The daring of the American girl of a century ago and the Frenchman's traditional habit of yielding to the will of "the ladies" form the fabric of an amusing bit of family record that Mr. William Allen Butler gives in "A Retrospect of Forty Years."

My aunt, Mary Allen, having spent some time in France, was proficient in her knowledge of the French language and manners, he says. On a visit that she paid to Lafayette, who was always exceedingly courteous to Americans, she told him that she had a great favor to ask. He indicated that he would grant it, and she begged him for a look of his hair.

"Madam," said the general, "I wear a wig!" But to show his willingness to meet her wishes, he proposed to remove the wig and let her appreciate any remaining natural hairs that she could find.

She accepted his offer and proved herself to be a good searcher by getting a few clippings, which she brought home, as a great treasure, and divided honorably with my mother. Each sister carefully preserved her quota of hairs in a ring.

Portable Army Baths.

The French war department has just completed the first of a series of portable bathing establishments which are about to be used in the French army. Each comprises three compartments, separated by double partitions. The soldier leaves his uniform and underwear in the first compartment, has a warm shower bath in the second, and in the third is given new underwear and receives his uniform which in the meantime has been disinfected by steam heat. The whole apparatus is carried on two automobile trucks. Each establishment is able to provide for about eight hundred men a day.

Beards Now Fashionable.

This war may revive the beard and also the habit of wearing the hair long simply through a dirt of barbers; but in our last great war the beard became fashionable from another cause, relates the London Chronicle.

Officers and men alike remained unshaven in the trenches before Sebastopol owing to the severe cold.

When they returned to England many of them still retained their beards, which were so admired by the opposite sex that civilians admired their rascals and whiffed impatiently for the hair to grow on their faces which would make them resemble the heroes of the battlefield.

Badger's Idol

By HI AKERS

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

First of all Badger fell in love with the girl on the screen. That's why he began to try to write moving picture scenarios. He was already a successful story writer, and his friend Towson told him he was a great boob to waste his time on this "blooming shirk game." But what are you going to do with a man who has fallen in love with a face on a film? He must write a play for that shadowy person to interpret, and make alive or perish miserably. You might as well let him go to his doom untrammelled, since he will go.

Edith Faber played the beautiful, unsophisticated, unselfish, and always wronged heroine with appealing force. When the manager handed back to Badger his first attempt at "not exactly suited to his needs," he added: "You see there must be part, too, for Miss Hall. She's the one who plays the boarding house keeper."

"What! that horrid old shrew?" exclaimed Badger.

"Exactly. She's got to have a character part. We're under contract to her. She's some relation to Miss Faber."

Badger said he would like to try again, and would take a look at Miss Hall. He went home thinking it was just the sweet selfishness of Edith Faber to make the manager engage a rather undesirable relative. He was deeper in love than ever. He bombarded the manager with scenarios, and at the fourth venture had the bliss of having one accepted for the lovely Miss Faber. It was called, "The Soul of Stella," and Badger waited anxiously for the filming process to begin.

They let him into the studio one day after they had begun taking the picture. He passed through a long corridor lined on one side with closed doors, one of which being partly open disclosed the fact that they were dressing rooms, and that a young woman in a kimono was applying paint plentifully to her features. Through a labyrinth of packing boxes, furniture, properties, scenery, and paint pots, Badger finally came within range of a man with a camera. He was quickly steered to a safe distance back of the man, and saw a man sitting at a desk while a girl talked to a youth behind his back. Her conversation was in an undertone, entirely unintelligible, and Badger wondered what it was all about. He did not remember having seen a scene in his manuscript. Later on he was told that they had to put that in to make the story clearer. Still later on he found they had put in so much and taken out so much to make the story "clearer," that it was not clear to him that he had written it at all. However he made no moon, believing they knew the business of thrilling the public better than he did, also believing it would please them to have him think this. The small scene had to be put over so many times that the anxious author began to think they beautiful heroine would not appear that day. But when luncheon commenced to loom up in persistent rivalry with his desire to see her, she came in rather disgraced, he thought, by the ghastly make-up, but still fascinating.

Before Badger left he had the felicity of meeting Miss Faber, and on closer acquaintance was more than ever in love. He saw her leaving the place with a young girl, who might have been pretty had she not been so thin, and lacking in color. She seemed like a pale wild flower beside the brilliant blossom of the other girl's beauty. Badger concluded she was Miss Faber's maid.

The next time Badger went he arrived on the set so early that they were just putting up the set, and as he seemed in imminent danger to himself or his clothes being sacrificed, he endeavored to get out of the way, and he crept into a place of safety, an angle at the end of the corridor. Presently he heard voices. Two women were talking.

"I never could have believed you could be quite so unjust, so cruel as this. I've had to find out you could be intensely selfish and inconsiderate, but this is too much to stand."

"Oh, really," said the other. "You seem to forget I got you this job, that I made it a part of my contract that they sign you." The voice was very much like Miss Faber's. But lovers sometimes will not even believe their ears.

"Yes," admitted the other, "you did. I was very grateful till I found you expected me to serve you as a maid, make your clothes, wait on you hand and foot, and save you the wages of both a house servant and a maid. For a long time I've hardly been able to drag myself to the studio. I can't and I won't stand it any longer."

"So you want to chuck your job, and go back to your hall bedroom?" The voice was cruel and sneering.

"Edith Faber! Do you mean you would make them discharge me?"

"At the name Badger felt as though someone had dealt him a blow.

"Certainly," said Miss Faber. "I've got to have someone of some use to me."

"Why don't you hire a maid then?"

"Because I don't have to. I can easily get someone in your place," was the cool retort.

"But I am giving satisfaction here."

"Rather too much satisfaction. That's why your part has got to be cut down. What I say goes."

If thoughts were material "things," they must have heard on the other side of that partition Badger's idol go to the ground with a terrible crash. He felt rather dizzy and miserable. He had meant to listen. He had crept in there to save his head, and it seemed he had saved his heart. Though the process had been painful.

He heard them go out of the room, and peering out saw it was Miss Faber and the dreadful shrew he had created for the picture. He thought she could not possibly be the pretty, pale girl he had seen going away with Miss Faber, but later on he found out she was. He sought an introduction, and complimented her on her interpretation of his character. She took it modestly, but with a grateful gleam in her blue eyes that Badger was inclined to think even more adorable than the smile of his former idol.

When Badger had managed it so that they had become very well acquainted, he told her he had spoken to the "Perfection" Picture company, and they would engage her if she could be released from the one where she was. Badger knew he should never forget the look that came into her eyes when he said this. It was as though he had opened the prison door to one long kept in darkness. When Miss Hall saw him a few days later, she told Badger they were not willing to release her.

"They've got to," he shouted. "Will you let me manage it? Will you let me hereafter manage everything for you?"

There was such a tremendous emphasis on the "everything" that looked up questioningly. Then she looked down blushing. Badger had penetration enough to see there was no serious objection.

TOO MUCH FRUIT NOT GOOD

Medical Men Have Never Recommended That It Should Be Made an Exclusive Diet.

Whosoever eats fruit as a predominant article of diet soon learns that it has manifold disadvantages, especially in childhood, says the Medical Record. Because of the exquisite flavor and refreshing quality of fruit, the child is naturally attracted to it and will eat it to excess. The bowel disorders that are apt to follow its use can of course be explained in part by infected dirt and dust.

Much must depend on the evolution of the fruit—whether extremes of heat, cold, humidity, etc., have interfered with normal maturity. Certain kinds of fruit, as oranges, grapes and ripe bananas, are so bland that they can be eaten freely. Others are laxative, some are astringent, while a few, like the strawberry, have for many persons some specially irritating if not toxic property.

Fruit should be washed well, and all fruits that can be peeled should be peeled. "Fruit," says the Medical Record, is recommended especially for the rheumatic, gouty, arteriosclerotic (preliminary period) and numerous other classes of invalids, for its content of organic acids. The apparent value of fruit in constipation is known to the public. Where there is danger of deficiency disease, as in the case of bottle-fed infants, sailors, etc., the value of fruit juices is also well known.

Hence, certain classes of subjects profit by being fruitarians to a considerable extent, but exclusive fruitarianism is a chimerical for many reasons."

Speaking Out.

I keep learning that there is nothing which reaches men's hearts like talking straight out the convictions and emotions of your innermost soul. Those who hear you may not agree with you, or they may not understand you fully, but something indecomposable, something vital, passes. And as for a boy or a girl, it is one of the sorriest of mistakes to talk down to them; almost always your had of fifteen thinks more simply, more fundamentally, than you do; and what he accepts as good coin is not facts or precepts, but feelings and convictions—life. And why shouldn't we speak out?

Inherited Qualities.

Various kinds of arithmetical appear to be dependent on different functions of the brain, and are therefore probably inherited independently, if they are inherited at all. To assume that the resemblance between parent and offspring in arithmetical ability is due to association, training and imitation, is not plausible. If this were the case, a class of children ought to come to resemble their teacher, but they do not. Moreover, the child sometimes resembles more closely the parent with whom he has been least associated in daily life.

John's Help.

"John, dear," said Mabel, as her lord and master entered the house, "I've just had a letter from mother, and she is coming to spend a month with us. It is a pretty expensive trip for little mummy, and I wondered if we couldn't help her out a little." "Of course we can," said John, giving his wife a generous kiss. "Just you write and tell her that I'll only be too glad to pay for her railway ticket home again as soon as she decides to go."

Milton's Busy Day.

Milton White, colored, pretty near monopolized the entire blotter at Second police station last night. Milton is in jail and the following charges are hooked opposite his name along down the blotter: Bringing more than a quart of ardent spirits into Virginia; drunk and disorderly; stealing $4 in currency from John Henderson; assault and battery on the person of his wife, Kate; contempt of court; carrying concealed weapons.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Hard to Hear Airplane at Sea.

While it is widely known that an airplane can be heard for some distance off on land, on water the tapping of the waves and the whistling of the wind through the rigging and superstructure of a vessel make it almost impossible to hear the power plant of an approaching seaplane until it is almost overhead. Hence the submarine plying the surface
